

Native Heartbeat Drums: Dream

The Dream

In this dream of the night of the 11th of March, 2008, I found myself among a small group of men around a camp fire - most were Native Americans. It was late at night and the fire lit the faces of the men but not much else was visible.

As we sat and begin drumming with the others, the beat of the drums became the beat of our human hearts and all of the hearts gathered together began to beat together as one heart and we sang as one voice in worship to Creator. This one heartbeat of the group enabled all to know what was the mission for the group but the mission was never spoken.

Interpretation

The group of men are perhaps related to the 70 prophets identified above except this group were associated with the Native American people.

It is well documented that the Federalists and NWO factions within the US Government have acted upon a plan of of both secret and open genocide of Native Americans for hundreds of years. Such activities include starvation, economic dependency, forced sterilization, the release of deadly diseases and toxic 'energy' onto tribal lands and the stealing of the better land that can produce food and income.

In opposing these evil forces, the survival of the tribes will come through a tribal unity where Y'Shua will lead them/us into a full self-reliance and independence from Federalist controls and their organizations.

This does not mean war is eminent but the mission is more likely a move toward a complete self-sufficiency from the resources found on the land.

I would suggest that any direct confrontation with US Federalist police or military forces would be disastrous. Rather develop existing natural resources with innovative designs to become completely independent. I believe such designs will come by revelation from the Holy Spirit.

As to the mission...it remains a secret and is revealed to those that are led by the Holy Spirit to the campfire 'pow-wow' with drums in hand at the appointed time.
