

Curse of the Nephilim: Dream

by David Michael, info@glentivar.org

In the early morning of the 14th of April 2016, I found myself in a shopping mall type building. I was at a storefront in this mall and putting my name on the window as a Doctor of Psychology. I went inside and found the office full of people. It seemed I had taken over someone's practice. One small room had three counselors with clients. One client was being delivered from demons.

The main conference table was cluttered with small lamps of various sizes, shapes and colors. There were so many lamps that there was no room left to use this table for work. I discovered that the workers had brought in these lamps as their version of the light.

I sat at a desk and went through a bunch of old computers to put one together to set up as a client database. The computers were ancient – back in the DOS-Windows era. As I was standing sorting computers, a man came in and took my chair. I looked around and asked “Who took my chair” and then noticed a man walking out of the door with my chair. He came back later and I said to all not singling him out, “Whoever took my chair needs to take the responsibility to bring it back.” With this, the man left to get my chair.

I then heard the words for a title of a book. “Curse of the Nephilim: Deliverance from Demons.” I understood this would be a book I am to write for this ministry. The dream then ended.

This dream was fairly clear. I am to become a doctor of psychology. Secondly, I am to set up an office in a very public place to provide counseling and deliverance as needed to many clients. Thirdly, I am to assure that the staff are all of the same faith in YHWH and do not come presenting many religions and theories as versions of light. In addition, I am not to use the methods of the past for keeping data on clients organized. Finally, I am to write a book titled, “Curse of the Nephilim: Deliverance from Demons.”

The curse of the Nephilim is in that when the Nephilim die, they become evil spirits. Male Nephilim when they die become Demons. Female Nephilim become Sirens. These disembodied spirits then seek to possess preferably human bodies to have a connection to the physical world to again enable them to express their many sinful acts they did when in physical form. The need is to deliver men and women from this curse of the Nephilim and cause them to be driven to places where they cannot harm creation.

I have resolved that since I travel around so much, I will seek a DPsych degree online. I will also begin writing the book. The rest of this directive will come in due time.
