

Speaking with Animals: Journey of the Night

In a journey of the night on the 10th of March, I found myself among a large group of domesticated animals in what appeared to be a farm somewhere. I was wandering among the animals and chatting with them in English and they were responding in English. I was asking the question to them, "What do you want from man to be more comfortable." I had different answers.

The one the stood out was from a sorrel horse. He said, "We want peace and we find the best peace serving those who have the peace of YHWH ruling in their lives." I was somewhat startled at the wisdom of this answer. He did not ask for better food or pasture, less work or a better barn. He simply wanted the peace of God to be his within his world of service.

I can only say this is what all creation wants. As the bible says, "all creation groaneth in travail until the manifestation of the sons of YHWH." This manifestation is evident in the "peace of YHWH that rules and reigns within our hearts."

I encourage all to seek peace so that those humans and animals under your care might also be in peace. Seek the ruling peace of YHWH that the land beneath your feet might also be at peace and produce food for you, your family and your animals.
