

A Deeper Covenant

by David Michael

Third to First Person Context

In the early morning of the 27th of March 2019, I was upon a mountain somewhere in the desert of the South West US in a dream. The words were spoken to me from what seemed like heaven. I puzzled at these words upon hearing them but later understood the contextual difference.

“Jesus said this... Jesus said that. The Apostles taught that...”

Then I heard...

“I say this. It shall come to pass. I am....”

Reflection

Upon reflection, I realized that as long as we are quoting what another says. It is not a true faith and covenant that we have embraced internally to become who we are. It is simply a third party quote with little power or impact. In declaring “I say this...I am...” we are not speaking for ourselves but in the power of the Holy Spirit as a prophetic voice. This may seem like taking the glory from God and claiming to be a god but this is not the case.

As it was said by Y'Shua, “if you believe, say to this mountain be moved and it will be moved.” And again Y'Shua said, “if you forgive the sins of one, they will be forgiven but if you do not forgive the their sins, they will not be forgiven.”

A Deeper Covenant

This is a relationship of deep covenant and trust between us and YHWH. This has been made possible by the shed blood of Y'Shua. It is “no longer we who live but Christ (Messiah) who lives in us.” This is a major leap forward in our walk of faith.
