

Dragon Hunter Armada

by David Michael

Armada of 5 Ships

In the early morning of the 27th of February 2019, I was in a room that appeared to be nautical in nature in the era of the 17th -19th centuries. I am not sure if it was aboard a sailing ship or on land. There were five men in the room including me and we were chosen to become the captains of 5 ships in a special dragon hunting armada.

Each of us went over to a large shelf in the room and picked out a helmet that I believe were captain's helmets to be used during battles with dragons. I was the third to choose a helmet and took two helmets. One I took was like the others which was a simple bronze skull cap but the other had dragon wings on the sides of the helmet. The 5th man among us did not get a helmet but was counted among us and was dressed like a viking already with helmet. The rest of us were dressed in more Roman military styled clothing.

Design of Ships

We were soon to get underway and one of the other captains and I were together and I asked him about the hull design of the ships - whether they had a deep keel or not. He then drew the hull design for me and I copied it as a shallow draft weighted keel with a heavy straight rail down the center line of the ship so it could be beached for land assault if needed. The ship was about 100' to 150' in length and twin masted designed for speed and maneuverability as used the late 19th century. It looked like the ship's design of a 19th century extreme clipper ship designed for fast runs between Europe and China reaching average speeds of 20 knots.

The ships did not have ball canons but shot what appeared to be canon propelled whaling harpoons with hooks in the tips and ropes attached to capture, retrieve and then kill the dragons.

Eating Dragon Meat

As we were underway at sea, a concern came up about eating the meat of dragons that had been killed. This question suggests we were at sea for some time and some dragons had been engaged in battle and killed. A fear emerged among the men of the Armada that eating dragon meat would alter their minds and cause them to become rash, aggressive, untrustworthy and even dangerous to the mission as if the meat had a draconian toxic effect in turning the men to the will of the dragon even though it was dead. It was then posted that dragon meat was not to be eaten under any circumstances.

The dream then ended.

Interpretations

The armada is a spiritual armada anointed by YHWH to hunt down and destroy dragons who are fallen angels of some power and standing in Lucifer's armies. The ships are sailing vessels powered by the winds which in this context is the Holy Spirit. These dragons are to be hunted down and captured and then killed all over the world. One man (me) got two helmets with one helmet having dragon wings.

I understood this winged helmet to be for the admiral of the fleet whereas three others accepted a captain's helmet. The viking captain received no officer commission or helmet from the Armada but was clearly an ally in this war against the dragons. He already had a helmet.

Capture and Imprisonment

The ships we had with shallow draft hulls designed for high speed and maneuverability suggests these ships were chosen specifically to chase dragons at sea and to quickly access land if needed. The use of the whaling harpoons shot from canons means we were tasked to capture, hold and neutralize the dragons... not just kill them. Since one cannot really kill an angel – even a fallen one, this death was really a capture and neutralize by spiritual imprisonment. The hooks at the ends of the harpoon suggests there is some way to hook the fallen dragons and to reel them in as captured enemies. Perhaps it is appealing to their pride that becomes their Achilles heel?

To eat of the meat was to communicate in any way with the captured dragons which was shown to be toxic to the men. All communication with fallen angels and their hordes is to be extremely limited to fact finding only.

Five Captains – Five Ships

The choosing of 5 captains by YHWH in this mission is significant. Even today, special forces and SWAT teams are often 5 in number who work together in a single tasked mission often pursuing a single target. This suggests the 5 ships and captains worked together in the capture and imprisonment of each fallen angel dragon. It should be clarified that fallen angels are not demons who are Nephilim who have died and are now disembodied souls that cannot be saved.

These fallen angels in the form of dragons are of a much higher rank than demons and are the masters of demons and often human armies. They are also the masters of some Luciferian alien armies yet to be seen by human kind on earth.

Abyss Opened

The conclusion of this dream is that YHWH is well prepared for the dragons wars that are to come upon the world soon. My initial thought is when the Abyss is opened in the Euphrates River (actually in the Persian Gulf) as prophesied, these fallen angels who initially fell and took the daughters of men in spawning the Nephilim hybrid and then imprisoned there will be released and this will begin the dragon wars.

Final Thoughts

Five captains and five ships are to be chosen... or already have been chosen. This is a prophetic ministry in capturing the mission Jesus and of Daniel, John, Elijah and Enoch. I will suggest the harpoons are best represented in the spiritual protections provided by the Armor of God as described in Ephesians 6:11. The armor protections are as follows.

1. Garment of Praise
2. Helmet of Salvation
3. Belt of Truth
4. Shoes of the Gospel of Peace
5. Breastplate of Righteousness
6. Shield of Faith
7. Sword of the Spirit.

It also seems right that the scripture that reads, “They over came the devil by the blood of the lamb and the world of their testimony...and they did not shrink from death” is applicable. May the Lord raise up warriors and knights for these end times who can stand their ground against the devil, his fallen angels and his demonic hordes.
